THE ANDROSCOGGIN RIVER.

IN SEVERAL PARTS—PART THREE

In the year of A. D. 1700 a communication of much length and importance was sent from the Eastern Country (Maine) to the Gov. General of New England at Boston by an authorized agent proposing an official visit to the Eastern coast and outlets of the river, secure facts and make plans of all the forts from a personal examination, and report in detail. The "Report" in manuscript is very exhaustive. It would fill a page of the Citizen to overflood. I can make only a few condensed quotations. The whole report shows pretty conclusively the situation of the Indian headquarters, who visited the regions of Bethel, and with other reports of what was done from time to time by the English to live in peace and harmony with the natives and that all the causes of trouble originated with the French, the Catholic Priests of the several tribes persuading the Indians to do as they did.

It seems the agent who signs himself as Wilfrid Wm. Rorer, at Boston, April 11, 1700, left there July 28, on board the Province Gally and arrived in Piscataqua river the next day, "receiving your Order to take the Plan of the great Island and Fort thereon, and also of the entrance into that river, and to sound the river."

"August 30th, Capt. Southack, Commander of the Gally brought me your Lordship's Order to go and visit St. George river."

The description of the situation of most pass over unnoticed.
The next stopping place was Pennaguid "which" he reports is "nine leagues to the westward of St. Georges, the mouth or entrance to the river he says is spacious and noble. The chart will show the situation of the Fort and depth of the river."

"There was formerly a village at Pennaguid of thirty-six well built houses on the neck of land, where stood the Fort."

"The French have entirely demolished the Fort at Pennaguid." And here follows a long description of the manner of building it and the easy way it was destroyed.

"The Kennebec river is a fine one and convenient for great ships where they can lay in safety from all danger."

"There never was any other fortification here but that of Newton, which was a small square Fort palisaded, therefore I have marked on the Chart the place which ought to be fortified not only for the defence of the mouth of the river but also for that of the river itself, and this I hold very necessary because the Savages have two Forts at the head of the river which are called Noridgewock and Comenagantick. They have two Jesuits in each Fort which do great hurt to the King's interest, and that of the public, because they instil into those people an aversion and hatred for His Majesty, and his subjects."

In passing over westward to Haco, a stop was made at Otero Bay (Port 1303) and a description furnished, the Citizen reader remembering this was 215 years ago. "The Plan in great," he says, "of the Fort as I have taken it will give your Lordship an entire view of its situation, and of its strength formerly. The French and Indians burnt it during the late War. It was built of Wood and very ill constructed being so situated as a neck of land that it could not be relieved, for the foot of Indian Street, where the Grand Trunk railroad passenger station is now seen. And it was ill built as it was all kept in repair, yet in consequence of this Fort people were in State Auditor's Monthly Statement.

State Auditor Callahan has submitted to Governor Haines his statement for July, which reads as follows:

AT THE CAPITOL. 400,000 Ballots To Be Sent Out For September Election. Auditor's Monthly Report.

Nearly 400,000 ballots, or to be exact, just 377,520 ballots, will be sent out from the office of the secretary of State for the constitutional amendments which will be voted on at the special election which will be held Sept. 8.

The first proposed constitutional amendment provides that Section 3 of Article 9 of the Constitution shall be amended by adding to the section the following words: "But the Legislature shall have power to levy a tax upon intangible personal property at such rate as it deems wise and equitable without regard to the rate applied to other classes of property."

The other proposed amendment is whether the Constitution shall be amended as proposed by a resolution of the Legislature, permitting amendments to the Constitution to be voted on at regular elections.

Under the Australian ballot law, two sets of ballots are sent to every city, town and plantation in the State. This number is distributed by counties as follows:

Androscoggin,	26,610
Aroostook,	27,000
Cumberland,	53,100
Franklin,	11,330
Hancock,	19,800
Kennebec,	35,230
Knox,	13,300
Lincoln,	11,040
Oxford,	20,100
Pemquid,	42,240
Piscataquis,	11,100
Sagadahoc,	10,050
Somerset,	20,830
Waldo,	15,900
Washington,	22,920
Total,	377,520

In addition to the ballots for the proposed constitutional amendments 114,940 will be distributed in the 3rd District for the election of Congressmen to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Porret Goodwin of Skowhegan. These ballots will be distributed by counties as follows:

Hancock,	19,800
Kennebec,	35,230
Somerset,	20,830
Waldo,	15,900
Washington,	22,920
Total,	114,940

Under the Australian ballot law when the name of the party goes on the ballot by petition, that petition must be filed seven days before the election, but with an understanding with the secretary of State the petition is filed at his office long before that time as a rule so that the ballots may be printed and distributed in the different cities, towns and plantations. Irving E. Vernon of Portland, chairman of the Progressive State Committee, has assured Secretary of State Alexander that the petition of the Progressive party will be filed not later than Aug. 10, which will be ample time. It will require 423 signatures to place the Progressive party on the ballot, or one name for every 400 votes cast in the district at the last general election, which in 1912 it is thought that the Socialists will name a candidate by petition as a member of that party was at the State House, Saturday, gathering information as to whether or not they will have a candidate in the fall.

The vote in the last primary election will be canvassed by the Governor and Council at its session, Monday. Under the primary law within 15 days after the successful candidate has received official notification from the secretary of State each shall file a certificate, properly sworn before a notary public or a justice of the peace, telling how much money he spent in the canvass. John A. Peters of Ellsworth, the successful Republican candidate for the House of Representatives, has filed his certificate.

BETHEL LADIES CLUB CONCERT

The concert program presented to this community promised pleasure from the choice of selections, but the music lovers in the audience were not prepared for the unusual quality of the evening's entertainment.

Mrs. York, once a resident of Bethel, has always been most pleasantly remembered, and her fine contralto accompanied her, and the daughter, whom the village will, henceforth, be proud to claim as a Bethel girl.

Mr. Bingham's appearance before a Bethel audience, violin in hand, is always the signal for an enthusiastic greeting.

Mrs. Marble's graceful appearance upon her entrance gave the key-note to what one might expect.

But a surprise came when the young soprano, Miss Helen Sherman York, with a girlish simplicity of bearing which deceived one as to her maturity of mental and musical development, began to sing. The beautiful bell-like tones filled the hall with such a reserve of force, such controlled power that one listened breathlessly as the musical intelligence used the lovely voice to give the interpretation of each song with a breadth of conception and delicacy of shading that left one wondering at the close of the varied group of compositions that a girl of twenty could give such finished renderings.

With a mental capacity that makes temperance the servant—not the master—this gifted young girl would seem to be standing on the threshold of a wide musical future. Her progress will be earnestly followed by many interested people.

Mrs. York's rich contralto, smooth and restful, shows the value of persistent development, of a naturally fine voice, and the singing of mother and daughter was beautiful and interesting.

Mr. Bingham's violin obligato added greatly to the musical effect of Mrs. York's song, while Mr. Thurston's accompaniments were most satisfactory in interpretation, support and finish.

Mr. Bingham's violin solos, with Mrs. Marble's charming accompaniments, were enthusiastically received, the pure, sympathetic tones under Mr. Bingham's bow falling upon a most appreciative audience.

Mrs. Marble's selections, ranging from grave to gay, were warmly received with applause for more.

The evening's entire program was one that would have given pleasure to any audience of music lovers, and the most sincere thanks, not only of the grateful members of the Ladies' Club, but also of all those privileged to enjoy, are extended to these gifted people whose talents were so generously bestowed as an aid, and as a delight.

W. C. T. U. PICNIC.

Tuesday the W. C. T. U. were the guests of Miss Shirley at the home of her sister, Mrs. E. T. Russell.

The meeting was opened in usual form by the President, Mrs. O. M. Mason, and after a short business session the program was given in charge of Miss Shirley. The following program proved very interesting: Singing, Love Divine; The Lord's Prayer in Union; Scripture Reading; Kingdom, Come; Song, written by Miss Shirley.

Miss Shirley then introduced Miss Taft, who is on the Editorial Staff of the New York Times, and is an ardent supporter of equal suffrage, and marched in the suffrage procession in New York. She gave a talk upon equal suffrage and read most convincing arguments in its favor, and emphasized the principles involved in the effort being made by women to work on equal basis in civic and national affairs. The program closed with a very appropriate poem, "Ma Can't Vote," read by Miss Shirley Russell, and the singing of "Dixie Be the Tie."

The party then spent a social hour and refreshments were served upon the lawn. Miss Shirley Russell was assisted by Miss Richard of Brooklyn, who is her guest, and Miss Belle Partridge.

The distant mountains, and the glimmer of the river running through the meadows gave a charming picture and inspiration, and as the shadows fell the party dispersed.

NEW PARCEL POST RULES.

Weight Limit Raised, Local Rates Reduced.

Banking By Mail Also Begins Aug. Fifteenth.

The new regulations intended to further popularize the parcel post will go into effect Aug. 15. Postmaster General Barleson announced Aug. 4, signaling on that date the weight limit will be twenty pounds instead of eleven as at present, and local rates will be reduced from five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound to five cents and one cent; for the second zone the rate will be cut from six cents and four cents to five cents and one cent for each additional pound. The Postmaster General announced also that on the same date the "banking by mail" feature would be introduced into the postal savings system. This change will enable would-be depositors living in remote districts to avail themselves of the benefits of the system.

Postal Savings Extension.
The extension of postal savings facilities to new offices was practically discontinued twelve months ago, but during July arrangements were made for the immediate extension of the service to 174 presidential offices, which heretofore have been denied postal savings facilities. Upon the completion of these arrangements, all presidential offices will have the service. Investigations are under way with a view to extending this service to fourth class offices at points where there is a demand for it.

"Many other changes," said the Postmaster General, "have been effected in respect of matters coming within the jurisdiction of the Third Assistant Postmaster General, which cannot fail to commend themselves to postmasters and the public." He referred particularly to the modifications of the regulations permitting the delivery of mail reaching the office of address on which wrong stamps had been used, to the address, without additional charge. Prior to this modification, mail bearing wrong stamps up on reaching its destination was charged with postage due at double the pre-

UNIVERSALIST FAIR.

Wednesday was a good day for the fair and almost everybody seemed to think so, for the villagers came in flocks.

The principal feature of the fair this year was the work of the Round Table Club displayed by the "Indians" in their "wigwag," consisting of many relics to show and packages to grab. The "Indian Dances" served tea to thirty souls and sold five dollars' worth of goods. The College girls decorated one corner of the room in real college style, with banners, pennants, etc., and displayed a variety of articles which girls love to own. The little Dutch lassie carried flowers for the young and Dutch cheese for the elderly ladies with Plymouth Rock gelatins for the cooks. The Round Table Club's worked calligraphy. Long may they live and their shadows never grow less!

In the chapel were found the usual display of fancy articles, aprons, cream and cake. Visitors purchased generously while all enjoyed the social hour before the real climax of the fair—the supper. And such a supper! Words fail to describe it, but the kind people who partook pronounced it the best ever served at the fair. Great credit is due the chairman of the Executive Committee and her assistants.

STATE BONDS TO BE SOLD PEOPLE DIRECT

The State of Maine is going to sell $300,000 of highway bonds and sell them over the counter, according to the order to that effect passed at the July meeting of the Governor and Council.

These bonds will be sold in denominations of $100, $200, $500 and $1000. They will be dated September 1st, 1913, and will bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent, payable semi-annually, running for 40 years. They will be sold at the State Treasurer's office and at the State Treasurer's office, both principal and interest.

Regarding the use to which this $300,000 is to be put, Gov. Haines said: "The people should understand that the new highway commission is created by the law which went into effect July 13th last. This law divides the roads into three kinds: State roads which the State itself hereafter will build and repair, and the towns and cities will have nothing to do with; State aid roads which the State will aid the towns to build and keep in repair, the work on which will have to be done under the supervision of the State highway department; and third, all other roads are left wholly, as now, under the care and control of the towns. The constitution as amended by the last legislature provides for an issue of bonds of $2,000,000 for the purpose of building and improving highways. The new law provides that these bonds shall be issued in serial numbers from time to time as the governor and council shall authorize. I am told that we can sell no bonds on a 4 per cent basis through the brokers, for the money brokers could not pay as much as par and accrued interest for them."

"After thinking the matter over very carefully, we have decided that we do not need any brokers to sell these bonds. If the State of Maine, a State that has practically no bonded debt or debt of any kind except for trust funds which it holds, and which is a very small amount, cannot sell its bonds at 4 per cent interest to its own people, it is time we all know it. If the people in Maine have not confidence enough in their own State to take its bonds, which to my mind are as good security as can be found in the world, I want to move out of the State. It is so late in the season that I doubt if we shall need to issue during the present year more than $300,000, although I wish we might be able to get work done through the State which would call for a much larger sum."

"While the new highway law provides that the automobile taxes shall be set aside to pay both the principal and interest of these bonds, two people should know that they are the promise of the State, like any other bond, and not dependent in any way for their payment on this fund, but a direct obligation of the State, backed by all the taxable property of the State, the same as any other estate bond. These bonds are exempt from all State and local taxation."

WIGHT—LITTLEHALE.
A quiet home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Little on Friday, August 1st, when their daughter, Ida May, was united in marriage with Mr. Fred Wight.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. Little of Bethel in the presence of the immediate families of the contracting parties, the single ring service being used.

Mr. and Mrs. Wight are enjoying a trip to New York and New Jersey. After their return they will reside at the home of Mr. Wight's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Wight. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wight are well known and their many friends extend congratulations and best wishes.

These are extra treads, made of very tough rubber, vulcanized on to the Goodyear tire. Thus a double-thick tread. The extra tread consists of deep-cut blocks. They present to the road surface countless edges and angles. Each block widens out at the base, so the strains are distributed, the same as on smooth-tread tires.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Pleasant Reveries—A Column
Dedicated to Tired Mothers
as they Join the Home
Circle at Evening Tide.

He doeth well who doeth good.
To those of his own brotherhood;
He doeth better who doth bless
The stranger in his wretchedness;
Yet best, oh best of all doth he
Who helps a fallen enemy.

We can help one another better by fanning a glimmer of goodness, than by censuring his faults.—E. Gilson.

There's enough of shadow along life's way.
Enough of sorrow and want and woe.
So the thing to do is be brave and true
And scatter sunshine wherever you go.

MOTHER'S DEVICES.

Mary Louise Graham.
Children should be taught the ethics
of complaining before they can speak plainly. The first law is that complaining is legitimate only when it is intended to serve a purpose—to remedy the evil in question. Idle complaining is a wrong to the victim who has to listen to it, as well as a confession of weakness of mind in the com-plainer. If complaining can make things better, by all means complain;
if it cannot, keep still and, in as far as possible, forget your grievance.
No one has a right to make another person listen to a detailed history of his (her, usually) discomforts. If the knowledge of them needs to be communicated, do it as briefly and dis-tachedly as possible. Of course, I do not require any such standards of stodicism from ignorant, untrained minds. This is merely the ideal that we have in view, the far-off goal that we hope some day to attain.

Then, too, mothers are exceptions;
a great many weaknesses are legiti-mate with mothers. What is the use of a mother if we can't let go with her and be just the weak, self-indulgent, cowardly little animals that we are at bottom? Our complaints do not here; she will not love us any the less for knowing our secret sins; we do not need to hide any transgressions from her. My children know that they can come to me and pour it all out, however trivial or childish it may be, and be sure of sympathy. At the same time, never lose a chance to make them realize that it is a self-indulgence, not to be permitted with people other than mothers and fathers.

It is the matter of the children's noses that I most often test my own stodicism, put to myself the question,
"Can I stand it?" And, to tell the truth, after I fairly put it to myself, I generally find that I can. Sometimes, however, I decide that the discomfort to myself is greater than the pleasure they are getting, of which the case is the by-product, and put a stop to it. If nervous women could only be made to realize how a little self-discipline, a little shutting of one's ears, diverting one's attention,
makes it possible not to hear noises,
they would find life much easier.

There has grown to be an unwritten law in our family as to the cheerful bearing of discomforts on trips of all kinds. It was never formulated, but the children discovered for themselves very early that this was an indispensable condition of being taken on excursions. Their father and I are very fond of walking and the children have always been eager to go with us, perhaps because we seldom take but a selected contingent. It was soon discovered, without explanation, that the child who insisted on drinks of water in places where no water flowed and himself left at home where water was plentiful. Children's fatigue is often comic.

When one of the children has a grievance against some other member of the family, the question is asked,
"Can't you overlook it?" I try to make him see that the harm to one's self of thinking unkind thoughts is so great that it is hardly justified by a very real wrong. If, however, I see that the sense of injury is too great to be passed aside, I take up the question and see that justice is done.
I try to teach all the children the great truth, that it does not pay always to insist on one's rights, that it is often better wisdom to submit to a slight wrong. The chip-on-the-shoulder attitude does not make for beauty of character or for harmoniousness of family life.

The object I have very much at heart in bringing up my children—to make them harmonious members of a household, comfortable people to live with. Many mothers loose this as sent out as completely as if their children were about to embrace the calling of hermit.

Personally, I dislike exceedingly to live in the same house with people who notice small discomforts, who complain, whether it be of the heat or the cold or the mosquitoes or the food or the noise or any of the other thousand annoyances that are always right there to be complained of. Very early I began to teach the lesson of "never mind." If one of the children complained of some discomfort, I always asked: "Do you really mind it?

Can't you forget it?" If the child insisted that it was too annoying to overlook, I then did everything in my power to remedy it. I am always very sympathetic to a grievance that is insisted upon.

Often, however, the last thing a child wants is to be bothered with having a complaint attended to. My children have come to realize that complaining of cold means that extra garments will be forced upon them;
that if they declare themselves tired,
they have to rest; that they cannot complain as an outlet for a vague dissatisfaction with life and then expect to hear nothing more about it when their mood has changed.—Exchange.

COOKING VEGETABLES.

Much of the palatability of vegetables depends on the method of cooking and serving. If watery and thickened they will not be eaten. The flavor of most vegetables is very volatile and easily dissipated by overcooking. More skill is required in their cooking than in cooking meat, as meat has a rich flavor that is hard to destroy. A poor cook may serve a good beefsteak so that it tastes fairly well, but make an utter failure with vegetables.
Squash, for instance, is usually a watery, unappetizing dish. It has a suggary juice, and if boiled in very little water or steamed, then mashed and daintily seasoned is very nice.

In serving vegetables variety in kind or method of preparation is essential. All vegetables should be cooked over very carefully and washed thoroughly. Greens, like mustard or spinach, must be washed in several waters. Green vegetables should be cooked uncovered in salted water. The quantity of water depends on the kind of vegetable. Strong flavored vegetables are cooked in a large quantity of water and then drained. The delicately flavored should be cooked in as little water as possible, and the water if an absorbed, used in the sauce.

Most vegetables are cooked below
the boiling point, as the flavor is dissipated at a higher temperature; if boiled rapidly the shape, too, is destroyed.
Any vegetable which is not served in the water in which it is cooked must be very thoroughly drained. This is best accomplished by turning it into a colander and letting it stand for several minutes; then placed in a smooth frying pan and shaken over the fire until quite dry. The greens, such as spinach, mustard, cabbage, etc., are of ten unpalatable on account of the quantity of water served with them. After draining, the vegetables should be carefully seasoned. The seasoning should be delicate, so that the original flavor will not be obscured.

Prof. Chason's discourse on the Passion Play at Oberammergau with the one hundred and twenty views was well worth seeing, as was also the story of Benvenuto and Paradise Lost. Miss Moir sang several popular songs and was received, as she always is, with much applause.

Jas. Littlefield, for a year or more, employed at the Red Cross Pharmacy, will complete his labors here on Saturday and leave Sunday for Portland. M. H. Blackwell of Bath was in town Tuesday on business.

Miss Jean Moir was given a party on her birthday, Wednesday of last week, by her friends. The evening was pleasantly spent in playing games and singing songs and the guests left wishing Miss Moir many happy returns of the day. Many beautiful presents were received by the young hostess among them being a handsome traveling bag and a beautiful locket.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Bethel Cannot Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved

In gratitude for relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Bethel, who so testified years ago, now say the results were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Bethel kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Louis M. Lacy, Bethel, Me., says: "I was troubled by my kidneys for several years. It did any work, I felt tired. I suffered intensely from backache. I also had much trouble from the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief as soon as I began taking them. I recommend this remedy to other kidney sufferers. I gladly confirm the statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

VOTE IS POSTPONED.

Opinion of the Public Utilities Bill Cannot be Expressed Till 1914.

A proclamation was issued by Gov. Haines recently setting the next general election in September, 1914, as the date for the people in the State to vote on the acceptance or rejection of the act, passed by the last Legislature, to provide for a board of public utilities and to define its duties.

The law would have gone into effect on July 12, but petitions bearing more than 10,000 signatures were presented asking that it be referred to the voters of Maine. This suspended the law until the people can decide upon its merits. The proposed board is given supervision over all public utilities.

In explanation of the delay in voting on this important measure, Gov. Haines says:

"Those who object to the law can certainly find no fault with the vote on it being deferred 13 months instead of six months, for all time it is suspended it is not a law."

"Our people have declared for the principles of the referendum, but it is a new and untried method of legislation in this State, and its usefulness and value in our system of government will largely depend upon the intelligent use the people make of it. The legislators have worked out this measure as they thought best for the interest of the people they represent. To refer it to the popular vote means the sustaining or disapproval of their action in this particular in other words the people, by this method, legislate for themselves. They should have ample opportunity to examine this question and thoroughly understand it as did the representatives who passed the law. We should then all be perfectly satisfied, whatever the result may be, to abide by the results of their decision, as it will be a fulfillment of the fundamental principles of our constitution that the people rule."

POEMS WORTH READING

THE ANSWER.

He sat on my knee at evening,
The boy who is "half past three,"
And the clear blue eyes from his sun-
browned face
Smiled happily up to me.
I held him close as the twilight fell
And called him "my dear little son."
Thus I said: "I have wondered for many days
Where it is that my baby's gone."

"I'd a baby once in a long white gown,
Whom I rocked just as I do you;
His hair was soft as yellow silk,
And his eyes were like violet blue;
His little hands were like pink tipped
flowers;
He, yours are so strong and brown.
He has slipped away and is lost I fear;
Do you know where my baby's gone?"

And my voice half broke as the thoughts would come
Of the sweet and sacred days
When motherhood's first joys were mine.
Was a shade of regret on my face
For those years my work kept a story
true,
And the boy, who is "half past three,"
Said: "The baby, he went to England,
And didn't you know? He's me!"
—Edith B. Smith in Christian Register.

"THE OLD-FASHIONED HOME- STEAD."

There's an old-fashioned homestead,
That stands by the sea,
And a boat, having mother, and three sons and three,
Whose sad, tearful eyes wonder far
out to sea,
As her lips part to murmur, "Once back, lad, to me."
Each night to the window to stare
she strays,
Where she plays a lamp, and the disk
shines rays
Are intended for one who is far, far
from home,
But brightly the light to the window
shall come.

"HOME."

There's a light in the window home
brightly for thee,
My brave sailor lad, so long gone
to sea,
Your absence and absence make with
er's bright beam,
So brightly the light to the window
shall come.
Oh, the story is simple, oft told in a day,
'Twas only a sailor who sailed far
away,
And parted from mother, whose heart
beat with care,
And a loving care pressing for words
to be said,
Alas, the long years came and went
as a dream,
And the story of exchange came from the
sailor's hand,
So brightly the light from the window
shall come.
Intended for him who takes care to be home.

"NOT AT HOME."

A letter changed to her with comfort,
A portion of elegant grace,
Her face had the smile of a queen,
And her hands like the softest of lace,
And her words like the softest of lace,
In the quietest part of the house.

A "letter of comfort" waiting about
in the quietest part of the house, and the words like the softest
of lace,
And the words like the softest of lace,
In the quietest part of the
house.

One of the little ones of the land,
Who have a picture of a man.

On a few words with the other said,
The words like the softest of lace,
And the words like the softest of lace,
In the quietest part of the
house.

THE LAND OF LONG AGO.

There's a land of peaceful beauty
Far beyond this vale of tears,
Where the past life softly sleeping
In the golden haze of years,
Where those things a sainted silence
Which the world can never know,
'Tis the land of long ago.

Long Ago! How old I wonder
To the dream soft and low,
Oh, the heart, my heart to ponder,
In the land of long ago!
For the past is such to comfort
For the days that cannot be,
And the heart is only waiting
For the land of long ago.

OVER 50,000 TOURISTS

And Estimate of Summer Business, Made by Maine Automobile Association.

Between 50,000 and 60,000 summer tourists from other states will come into Maine over the road between Portland and Bangor during the months of July and August according to statistics which have been compiled by the Touring Information Bureau of the Maine Automobile Association and which were made public Saturday. This estimate is the result of a census made by representative of the Maine Automobile Association at York Corner during the past two or three weeks and the figures are in every sense a revelation, showing accurately the tremendous automobile traffic into Maine, together with the possibilities for summer tourist business in the Pine Tree State with a system of good roads.

Probably every state in the union is represented by the cars which come in over this great artery of travel during the course of the year. These figures apply only to cars coming from states other than Maine. For instance on Sunday, July 27, between 8 A. M. and 6 P. M., 218 foreign cars entered Maine over the Portland-Bangor highway. These cars represented nine states and one Canadian province, and the number of people they carried was 962. This figure represents foreign cars alone, cars of all states including Maine passing in both directions on this day being 629, and the number of people carried by them being over 2,400. These figures represent only between the hours of 8 A. M. and 6 P. M. and it is known for a fact that a great many foreign cars came into the State both before and after these hours.

On July 26, 204 foreign cars came into Maine over the Portland-Bangor road, carrying 617 people, and on July 20, 209 cars entered, carrying 628 people. The following tables give the census in detail and give an interesting insight into the states which send the greatest number of tourists into Maine.

This census will be continued from time to time throughout the summer and the figures obtained will show accurately just what the percent of summer business is, coming into Maine by automobile. When it is realized that the automobile traffic into Maine over this one road every day represents several train loads of people, it can be seen what an immense factor the motor car is to the summer business of the State.

Another factor which must not be overlooked is that the road between Portland and Bangor is one of the great arteries of travel into Maine. Another great entrance into Maine is through Bangor, still another through Dover and Calais. N. H., a third important one is from Calais, N. H., and Kennebec Falls through Newry, a fourth is from Calais, N. H., to Calais, N. H., and from Kennebec, N. H., to Bangor, and one of the main important arteries at the present time is that from Dover, N. H., to North Berwick. The travel over this road is particularly heavy at the present time due to the fact that so much of it is coming this way rather than coming over the regular Portland-Bangor road while the construction work is going on.

It can be seen from this that the aggregate number of automobile tourists coming into Maine during the months of July and August will amount to figures which will be a surprise even to people who are supposedly familiar with the situation.

One of the principal complaints coming from summer visitors into Maine is that the State does not maintain its roads. They say that hundreds of miles of good highway has been built in the State but that it has been allowed to go to pieces wholly for lack of care. They declare if we would properly maintain the roads that have been built in the State within the last ten or fifteen years, we would have a system of good dirt roads the equal of any in the country.

BACTERIA IN MILK

At the Farmers' Week Course at Orono, Mr. H. W. Smith, instructor in Bacteriology, gave a very interesting lecture on Bacteria in Milk. In introducing his lecture Mr. Smith stated that it was his purpose to deal with the subject from the economic standpoint, treating only such phases as are of practical value to the farmer. He discussed principally the sources and action of bacteria affecting milk unfavorably.

The main features of the lecture were as follows: Bacteria are small, low forms of plant life, reproducing by division and capable of producing important changes in organic matter. As related to milk, we classify bacteria in the following divisions: First—their importance to the dairyman as a producer; second—their relation to the consumer; third—their relation to butter and cheese production.

The most common and influential organism to the dairyman is that species named B. Lactis Acidus. These species of bacteria sour milk with a smooth curd, but without the formation of whey. The organism is found prevalent in the air and on the body of the cow. B. Lactis Acidus are recognized by dairymen as desirable species to have in milk. Various other organisms are found in milk which are more or less troublesome to the dairyman. Such milk as rots, red, blue, stringy, and bitter are all caused by different kinds of organisms which work into the milk.

The sources of milk bacteria are as follows:

1. The cow. The animal itself is the chief source of milk bacteria. Dirty cows will always produce dirty milk. The cow should always be brushed and the udder, flank, etc. should be wiped with a damp cloth before milking.

2. The stable. Second in importance is the air of the stable. The method used in some foreign countries of milking in the open air reduces the chances of contamination from this source to a minimum. Cows, pigs, dirt, or dust should not be allowed to accumulate on the walls and ceilings of the stable. Great care also should be taken if the feeding of dry food just before or during the milking period is to be practiced.

3. The milker. This source of contamination can easily be controlled by the dairyman. Dirty milkers should not be allowed in the barn. Some diseases—like typhoid and tuberculosis—may be transmitted from the milker to the milk.

4. The milk utensils. Another source of the milk organisms and a very prolific one is the utensils used in obtaining and handling the milk. Covered milk pails used in milking lessen the liability of contamination. Thorough washing of the milk pails, cans, and bottles also means a further step in the production of clean milk.

WOULD LIMIT USE OF AUTO HORNS.

Boston Street Commissioner Favors Law to Reduce Unnecessary Noise.

Boston, Mass., July: Street Commissioner James A. Gullivan, after a ten-day trip investigating the traffic regulations of Chicago, Washington and New York, advocates a law prohibiting the use of auto horns except as warnings of danger.

"There is a rule in Washington," said Commissioner Gullivan, "which does much to abate the noise nuisance which is the source of much complaint in Boston. This rule provides that 'no person shall use a horn or other signal except to give warning to drivers of other vehicles and to pedestrians.'"

"From my talk with officials there I learned that accidents are less common than in Boston where, by statute requirements, horns must be sounded at every street intersection."

Similar restrictions as to the use of automobile warning signals are now in force in Chicago, Cincinnati, Newark, Jersey City, Sioux City, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Seattle, San Diego, Memphis, Louisville, Atlanta, Denver, St. Paul, Philadelphia, Des Moines, Dubuque and Portland.

The States of Connecticut and California have but recently passed laws to the same effect. In all cases the use of an adequate and necessarily powerful signal is required. The restriction as to its use is made in order to emphasize its meaning when it is actually necessary and to prevent its sound becoming so common as to attract no attention.
